

Lyndon Ji is a candidate for the Doctor of Musical Arts at the Yale School of Music under the guidance of Wei-Yi Yang. Previously, he completed his Artist Diploma (Indiana University) and Master of Music (University of Michigan) with Roberto Plano and Logan Skelton, respectively. He pursued Mathematics (B.S.) as an undergraduate at Yale and served as a Swensen Fellow. During this time, he studied piano with Elizabeth Parisot and Wei-Yi Yang.

In recent seasons, he has performed at the Gijón Piano Festival, American Matthey Association, American Liszt Society, Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center Masterclasses, Bowdoin International Music Festival (Fellowship), Norfolk New Music Workshop, and the Mozarteum Summer Academy. His numerous awards include the Grand Prize and Baroque Prize at the 2023 Chicago International Music Competition. Outside of music, Lyndon enjoys brewing coffee in all forms, cooking, games, and watching the joint antics of his wife and two cats.
